SENATOR CARPENTER AT WORK ON AN OLD SUBJECT.

The Death of the Prince Imperialtrookedness of a Liverpool Cotton Operator who Absconded.

WASHINGTON, June 20.-SENATE. Senator Davis (West Virginia), from the Committee on Appropriations, states that the committee were not able, in view of the state of business before the Senate, to report the resolution fixing the date of adjournment, but hoped to do so soon. Wallace rose to a privileged question, and presented the report of the Conference Committee on the judicial expenses bill, and asked for its present consideration. Senator Conkling said he did not know how far the committee had confined themselves to adjusting the disagreeing vote, and objected to considering the report in view of the understanding on the army bill. If another misunderstanding arose by reason of crowding out debate, the Republicans would not be to blame. After an animated debate Senator Wallace withdrew the report, and Senator Carpenter proceeded to speck on the army bill. Senator Carpenter argued that the nifth section of the present bill would prevent the President from using troops at the polls even when called on by a State, since the army if used at all must necessarily be used as a police force. He also criticised the language of this section as ambiguous and indefinite and denied that the presence of a few soldiers in the vicinity of the polls would be a menace to any honest voter. He continued to speak at considerable length, but on the ground covered for the most part by previous debates. Ingalls then read a speech sustaining the Pesident's action in vetoing the appropriation bills, during which there was some desultory discussion of the charge made by Ingalls that Southern Democrats intimilated colored Republicans and that this was the cause of the Kansas exo-

LONDON, June 20 .- The official account of the Prince Napoleon's death says that the Prince, with Lieutenant Cary of the Ninety-eighth Regiment, six men and one friendly Zulu, left camp at Keletzi Mountain, seven miles eyond Blood River, on the first instant for a reconnoisance. The party halted and unsaddled when ten miles from eamp. Just as the Prince gave orders to remount a volley was fired from an ambush in the long grass. Lieutenant Cary and four of the troopers returned to camp and reported, the Prince and two troopers missing. From their statements there could be no doubt the Prince was killed. LONDON, June 20 .- It is reported that a large firm in Liverpool, trading in cotton chiefly, are in difficulties owing to irregularities of one of the partners who has absconded. The assurance is given that the other partner, now on the way home from abroad, will be able to pay in full.

The Liverpool Courier says the person whose irregularities caused the dif-ficulties of a Liverpool cotton firm, and who absconded, is not a partner in the house, but a representative of a German firm. He speculated in the name of the Liverpool firm, without their knowledge or consent. He sold futures in cotton heavily at 5½d—one transaction being for ten thousand bales for June and July delivery. One of the principal members of the firm was to arrive n Liverpool on Thursday night to investigate the affair. It is uncertain who will suffer the losses occasioned by his default, as his principals may be able to repudiate the transactions. His collapse has depressed the cotton mar-

How to Shoot an Alligator.

Florida Correspondence Utica Observer.
The methods by which alligators are captured are varied, but the most novel and certain recipe is the following, which I will give for the benefit of those who contemplate engaging in the business: To begin with, you take about fifteen pounds of yellow dog. And now some over-particular persons may want to know what the color of the dog has to do with it, which is easily explained. There is more "yelp" in an ounce of yellow dog than in a ton of dog of any other color. In order to secure your y. d. you must be very observing, and find out at what negro cabin one can be found. Then, when the occupants of the homestead are away in the field, you must get the y. d. the best you can always taking good care the y. d. don't get you. Put the rope around his neck and abduct him to some lake where alligators are known to congregate.
You will, of course, have had the foresight to provide yourself with a ritle before this interesting state has been reached. You must then fasten your y. d. to a log or sapling some four or five yards from the water's edge; then make one end of a strong cord fast to yourself. Your novel machine is then in working order, and proper manipulation is all that is necessary to the suc-cess of the scheme. Now you will give your end of the string several vigorou jerks, until you hear a series of agoniz-ing yelps at the other end. Then you can appreciate the dog's color. can appreciate the dog s color.

When you have got your dog well warmed up to the work just glance out on the water; if there are any 'gators there you will see them making rapidly in a bee line for the bait. It is a sure thing; never knew it to fail. They will emerge from the water and make slowly and surely for that y. d. with open jaws. Then is the time for you to take an active part in the programme. If not too nervous about that time you can easily shoot the foremost reptile, and the others will take fright and flounder

the dog's tail and carry the other with you to some convenient log a little dis-

The first time I tried this admirable plan it did not end quite so auspiciously as I could de-I got my dog all right enough, and got his voice pitched to the right key, while I crouched behind a stump ready to shoot the 'gator that made his appearance. That reptile soon showed himself, and was some twelve or fourteen feet long. This was rather more than I had bargained for, but I blazed away at his right eye. Of course I failed to hit anything but his horny head, and the gator never winked, but came straight on for the yellow dog. I took in the situation at onee. The gun empty. away." Party Lines Strictly Drawn.

Buffalo Courier. Some of the moderate or semi-independent Republican papers have called the attention, particularly of Demo-erats, to the solidification of the Republican party which has resulted from the political contest of the present congressional session. There is unquestionably a great deal of truth in what they assert. By the surrender of Hayes to the "stalwarts" and their complete success in coercing him to veto the measures of Congress, the reform wing of the Republican party has practically been suppressed. That faction, which in the spring of 1876 favored the nomi-nation of Bristow, which subsequently supported Hayes not merely because he was the Republican nominee but on the strength of his letter of acceptance, and which regarded civil service re-form as a vital issue, is no longer even a secondary factor in the Republican party. The men having composed it having found "reform within the party a lost cause, have either retired alto gether or joined the triumphant stal-warts. The perfunctory pleas for re-form appearing from time to time in the moderate Republican papers, for the present have no significance. From a Democratic point of view we see no reason to regret this state of things since we firmly believe that the "sta wart" element is one of weakness to the Republican party, and must make its overthrow next year all the more "Stalwart" Republicanism renders still another involuntary service to the country. It tends to harmonize the Democracy and heal their dissensions. Considerable differences have existed in the ranks of our party, but the ex-treme position assumed by the admin-Democracy to realize the danger of divided counsels and the necessity of unity. The prospect of harmonious Democratic action in the approaching contest has decidedly improved since the stalwarts captured the administration. A liberal administration devoted to the principles of popular govern-ment might have had a pronounced disintegrating effect, but one that has the approval of Chaudler, Blaine and Conkling unites the Democracy and strengthens confidence in the party's ultimate success.

A New Poem By Chatterton. During the demolition of some old houses in Brooke street, Holborn, a collection of newspapers, periodicals, &c., of the dates 1765-70, was discover-ed among a quantity of lumber and disposed of as "waste" at one of the shops in the neighborhood. Among the packages thus sold a manuscript was found, and on examination a dramatic poem in blank verse was brought to light, num-bering about eight hundred lines, and perfect with the exception of the first few pages, which, however, apparently only contained the title and possibly dedication. The poem is signed with the capitol Cof the Saxon alphabet, and it is now believed that it is from the pen of the unfortunate Chatterton, who committed suicide in a house in Brooke street in 1770. The poem deals with love and revenge, is laid in the second Charles' days and abounds in many striking passages. The manuscript is now in the hands of Lord Houghton,

A SOUTHERN WEBSTER. ROMANTIC HISTORY OF AN AT

LANTA BARBER. Bob Yancey, of Georgia, a Putative Son of the God-like Daniel--The Story of His Life.

It is not generally known that there is to-day living in the city of Atlanta a son of Daniel Webster, but such is the fact. For the proof we rely not only on the intelligent account which the son gives of his own life, but also on the corroborating evidence of several prominent citizens, who say there is no doubt of the truth of the story. The son of Webster is a mulatto barber, well-known all over Georgia as Bob Yancey, a man of more than ordinary intelligence. In appearance he has some marks of striking resemblance to Webster, his broad forehead and widely-separated eyes are noticed as circumstantial proof as soon as you hear the story of his birth. A few days ago I had a conversation with Bob, in which he made the following statements. It is due to him to say that his story is corroborated by the members of his former master's family, who are still living. It is as follows:

Robert Yancey, whose real name is Robert Webster, was born at Gadsby's Hotel, on the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Fourth street, in Washington City, on the 20th of August, 1820. His mother was Charlotte Goobrick, a mulatto of rare beauty, and her father was one of the old aristocrats of Virginia. Mr. Godsby bought Charlotte from Billy Bullard, of Fredericksburg, Va., and took her to Washington to wait in his hotel. Daniel Webster boarded with him, and in this way saw Charlotte, and induced those intimate relations which supply a subject of this sketch. The matter was kept quiet in Washington at the time, though the truth was suspected by several of Mr. Webster's friends. After the birth of Robert, Charlotte became the waitingmaid of some of the most distinguished ladies at the capital. She was in the service of Mrs. Clay for a long time, and she continued to enjoy an intimacy with the greatest man of his time. Mr. Webster once gave her a beautiful gold necklace, which she accidentally left in a drawer in Mrs. Clay's dressingcase. Here her mistress found the necklace, and asked Charlotte whose it was. The girl was confused and frightened, and told the whole truth. It is said that Mrs. Clay showed the necklace to Webster, and asked him if he had ever seen it before. Afterward Charlotte was purchased by Mr. Webster. He took her to Boston and gave her perfect freedom, though she continued to be a household in his home. She died in Boston only a few years ago. Bob frequently heard from her. He says she talked freely to him of his origin, and told him many anecdotes of the private life of Mr. Webster, to him she was passionately devoted. When her son grew up he became the property of young Gadsby, who was a rash, hot-headed Southerner, and led the gay life so common in the old flush times. Once in Richmond he had been drinking and gambling desperately until he had lost all he had. He staked Bob, his body servant, against $1,500 in gold and lost. A man named Billy Martin won the son of Webster, but shortly afterward sold him to a Mr. Cunningham, of Charleston, S. C. This Mr. Cunningham was an uncle of Colonel Ben. Yancey, a prominent member of the present Georgia Legislature. Colonel Yancey fancied Bob, bought him and kept him as a body servant. Bob was such a faithful slave that his master in 1863 gave him his liberty and enough money to start a business in Atlanta. Here Bob did well and before the Confederates surrounded the city had saved quite an independency When Sherman's army passed through Georgia, with it came Captain Fletcher Webster, a son of Daniel Webster. He had heard the story of Bob's nativity, and accidentally found him while stationed in Atlanta. He bestowed various attentions on him. He gave him a picture of Daniel Webster, which Bob still has. Fletcher Webster was killed in a battle near Atlanta. Sherman's soldiers destroyed all the property Bob had accumulated. One hundred boxes of tobacco and other valuables of his were burned in Atlanta. Bob now has a claim pending at Washington for recovery of damages. He says that when he went there a few months ago, sev-eral distinguished gentlemen who knew his origin paid him very kind attentions. He is getting quite feeble and is very poor. His creditors not long ago closed out his barber-shop in Bob now does little stand on the street corners and talk of the grand days he saw long ago. A negro man named Henry Thornton died in Pleasant Hill, Oglethorpe county, on Friday night last, who was in many respects a remarkable man He was very industrious and honest and owned at the time of his death quite a farm of about fifty acres in a high state of cultivation. He was an avowed Mormon, and made no secret of living in polygamy. The Echo says that "in the same house he had living two wives, and each had blessed their husband with a large family of children; and what was more surprising hese two women had ever lived on the best terms and were said to be sincerely attached to each other. They worked for the common good of the household, and appeared to treat their rival's offspring as their own. Both at the time of the husband's death had young babies, and appeared to nourish them in common." When Henry died each of these women claimed to be his wife, and he left a will in which he bequeath ed to them jointly his property, with the proviso that they must always hold it in common. The Echo also says that this was not an exceptional case, but that polygamy is openly and general ly practiced in Oglethorpe, Georgia, mong the negroes.

Kumys, the Remarkable Beverage.

This wonderful drink of the Russ and the Tartar is a milky liquid of sweetish, acidulous taste, with a hint of sour cream, and sparkling with all the delightful effervescence of champagne. Really, it is simply fermented milk. Descriptively, a simple and truthful title, for it is milk-wine. However it may be described, it is a novelty of a pleasant kind, and has become immensely popular upon this side of the MURDER WILL OUT!

THE TRIAL OF BOB MTORKLE

One of the Most Brutal and Cold-Blooded Murders on Record-Conviction of the Parties. Correspondence of the News.

TAYLORSVILLE, June 18 .- The trial of Bob McCorkle, colored, for the murder of J. Wesley Wycoff on the night of the 7th of November last in the county of Caldwell, and Sarah Wycoff, wife of the deceased, as accessory before the crime, was removed from Alexander county Superior Court, and the case was taken up on Wednesday, the 4th day of June, and occupied the remainder of the week, His Honor, J. R. Graves, presiding, and Solicitor J. S. Adams, assisted by Colonel R. Z. Linney and T. H. Cobb, Esq., prosecuted for the State. Colonel L. M. McCorcle, Colonel George K. Folk and Will G. Burkhead, Esq., appeared for the defendants.

THE FACTS IN THE CASE, appeared in the evidence given in the trial are about these: J. Wesley Wycoff, the deceased, was a well to/do farmer and mechanic and resided near The prisoner Bob McCorele, is a coal black negro about sixty years of age and asugly as thed—I himself—however, we have never seen his satanic majesty, and hope we never will, but had we to paint an imaginary picture of him we would take the defendant for our subject.

The defendant, Sarah Wycoff, who was the wife of the deceased, is about thirtyfive years of age, fair complexion and rather good looking and is said to be of respectable parontage.

The prisoner, Bob McCorcle, lived about one mile from J. Wesley Wycoff, who frequently hired him to work on the farm. The deceased was away from home a great deal working at his trade, and the prisoner, Bob McCorcle, became too inmate with his wife, Sarah Wy-coff, and the deceased when told that such relations existed between the defendants did not believe it, but he finally became convinced of the truthfulness of the report, and told his wife "that she must not let Bob McCorcle come to his house in his absence, and that if he did he would kill him." She communicated these threats him." She communicated these threats to Bob and gave him a pistol to defend himself with. The defendant was seen at the house of the deceased after be had threatened to kill him, and on one occasion was seen near the house of the deceased, CONCEALED IN SOME GRAPE VINES, and bushes stuck in his "wool." He always carried an old army musket, and threatened in the presence of different persons to kill the deceased. On the night of the 9th of November last, about the hour of 8 o'clock, J. Wesley Wycoff, the deceased, was sitting by his fireside; the dog barked and he stepped out and was shot down. He exclaimed: "Lord have mercy upon my soul," and expired. All the cirsumstances pointed to Bob McCorcle, the defendant, as the perpetrator of the deed. He had threatened the life of the deceased; he worked at a Mr. Sherrill's on that day, and left there, a distance of one that day, and left there, a distance of one mile from the house of the deceased, at seven o'clock, just one hour before the murder; the defendant was ar-rested; the shot found in his shot-pouch were the same kind as those ex-tracted from the dead body of Wycoff, and the paper found in his (defendant's) shot-pouch was identically the same as shot-pouch was identically the same as that shot out of the gun that killed Wycoff and found near his dead body; the deceased had two dogs "both fierce and one had been in the habit of hunting with the defendant, Bob, and the other had not; the former did not bark, the other did. Several persons, both white and colored, who heard the report of the gun that killed the deceased swore that they believed that it was the defendant's (Bob's) musket; the night after the murder was committed the defendant (Bob McCorcle) went to a colored preacher in the neighborhood and told him that "he was mightily troubled; that he rolled and tumbled all the night before, and had not slept a wink," and asked him "if he thought a person could get forgiveness for mur-

Colonel Linney first showed the motive of the defendant in committing the murder and cited David vs. Uriah, Divine history, and the case of Edward the II. of England as precedents and put on the finishing touch by quoting Shakespeare (we have forgotten the quotation); then he showed the will of the defendant to commit the crime and quoted the proof that he had threatened the life of the deceased; then the opportunity; then the other facts and circumstances that made the defendant Sa-rah Wycoff accessory before the crime. Colonel Linney said "that his learned brother, Colonel McCorcle, who had just preceded him had painted in an eloquent and impressive way the importance of the case, and spoke of his clients, one of whom was a poor negro, having been thrust into jail and forced into trial for their lives which had been attempted to be sworn away by perjured villains without time to prepare their defense, but not one word did he say about J. After a fair and impartial charge from His Honor Judge Graves, the case was given to the jury at 8 o'clock p. m., Friday, and they returned a verdict of guilty as to both the prisoners, Robert McCorcle guilty of murder and Sarah Wycoff accessory before the crime. At 40 clock Saturday morning, the prisoners were remanded to jail and brought out again at 10 a. m. that day. His Honor asked if the counsel for the defense had any thing to say why sentence should not be passed? Col-onels Folk and McCorcle said that they had no exceptions to make to His Honor's charge and that they thought that the prisoners had had a fair and impartial trial, and to be candid they had

Cincinnati Enquirer. "I don't reckon you ever heard the story of Zach Chandler and Eugene Hale," remarked Grandfather

Lickshingle yesterday evening. The family said they had heard it a number of times, and, as if the recollection of it was too much for them, laughed inordinately. Grandfather could not be choked off, however, and went right ahead: "The scene is laid at the residence of Zachariah Chandler; time, when Eugene Hale was courting his daughter, the girl whom he afterward made his wife. Hale was pretty far gone on Miss Chandler, and one evening induced three or four amateur musicians. friends of his'n, to go around with him to Chandler's house and serenade the

It was about midnight when the serenadin' party arrived, and, sneakh.' on. It was about midnight when the serenadin' party arrived, and, sneakh.' up in front of the house, they stood behind the lilacs and struck up some soulful serenade or other. They played along soft and easy like for about five minutes, when an up-stairs window was raised, and who should step gaily forth upon the piazza but old Zach himself. Hale told me afterward that he fully expected the old man to blaze away at them with a shotgun, or at least fire a bucket of slops on their heads, but he didn't do nothin' of the kind. He hemmed and hawed a while, an' then, much to the astonishment of the boys, sailed in: "Fellow citizens: Of course you do not desire a speech from me at this late hour, but I wish to thank you from my heart for this testimonial of your kind appreciation of my poor services." A couple were occurying a middle seat in the ladies' car, having got on at a way station. Probably attracted by the invisible fascination which never fails to bring about a contretemps, a gentleman from a rear car came in and took a seat immediately behind the pair: There was a shock of surprise as his eyes first fell upon them, and deathly pailor overspread his countenance. But this was for an instant only. Then a flush succeeded, and a queer smile began to play around the corners of his began to play around the corners of his set, determined lips. An hour passed. The billing and cooing went on, and the man was a patient and evidently an interested listener. The people in the car began to perceive that something unusual was going on. Finally the man leaned forward, with that peculiar smile still hovering about his lips, and said:

COTTON MANUFACTURING.

We notice in several of the minor newspapers of the South that some doubt exists as to the advisability of Southern capitalists entering into and investing largely in the manufacture of cotton. As these papers exert more or less influence in their respective localities, it would be well to place certain matters in a clearer light, especially as to the prime objection urged, viz.: its being a non-paying enterprise, as shown upon the investigation of the affairs of certain large manufacturing firms in Rhode Island, commencing with the Sprague failure and including the insolvency of the largest Fall River corporations. The excerpt that is going the rounds and adduced in evidence of the asseverations that cotton manufacturing in the South will not pay is as follows:

The stockholders of the Border City mills, with a capital of $1,000,000, have lost the whole of it; not a cent left. The mills remain, but they are in the hands of creditors, not stockholders. The Sigamore mill has sunk the whole of its capital, $500,000, and then $200,000 more was put in and that was lost, making $700,000 in all absolutely sunk. The Union mill, with a nominal capital of $170,000, but with property worth 800,-000 at least, has all been sunk, a total loss. The Tecumseh mill sunk eighty per cent, of its capital; the capital was was $500,000; loss $400,000. The Robeson mills, with a capital of $260,000, sunk sixty per cent; loss $156,000. The Fall River Print Works, a cotton mill under that name, went into bankruptcy; capital, $200,000, all a dead loss. Montauk mills, capital, $250,000, a dead loss. American Print Works, capital, $1,000,-000, all sunk-that is, the indebtedness will take all the property. The losses or depreciation of the other mills in stock is equal to one-third at least. The actual known loss, not including the depreciation of the stocks in the other mills, is $4,500,000, of which $4,000,000 is by the people of Fall River and immediate vicinity.

This is certainly a bad showing of the Fall River mill corporations, and at first thought it would seem sufficient to discourage any enterprise of the kind in this section. If old established concerns cannot carry on business without sustaining such losses on the original plant, how will new corporations be able to sustain a business of this kind?

The truth is this sad showing of capital wasted and stockholders impoyerished is not due so much to the business as dishonesty in management, the case of the Spragues excepted, and this case is not to be taken at the present time as a criterion. When the Spragues were compelled to suspend, operators in other businesses were tumbling; their action was compelled through overproduction and lack of a market. It was no fault of theirs. As for the others that are now under a cloud, as cited above, it is but just to say that the extremely and exceptionally heavy losses were due to the criminal acts of the managers, such men as Chace, Hathaway and Stickney, rather than to the ill-considered action of the investors or the influence of discontented opera-

On the other hand, some of the Georgia papers are urging the building of little cotton mills-neighborhood mills costing comparatively little, say from $2,000 to $5,000, and run by water-power These mills are not intended to contain a loom-they are for spinning not weaving. The Atlanta Constitution says:

If the South by means of such little mills could turn all of its fleecy product into yarn, selling it only in that shape, a single decade would not pass before it would be the richest section of the country. We have not capital enough to attempt such weaving, but there is not a county which is not able to secure machinery with which to spin its entire product. There is money in it to the spinners, to the planters, and to all interested in the welfare of the South. In the future we should market our great crop in the form of yarn, and to do that we need little mills at every water-

We have heretofore cited the cases of comparatively large concerns that have been established in the South, and the success they have so far met with, and there is room for more. With ample water power, with a constantly increasing population, it is the duty of the South to care for herself, and one of the principal modes of making such provision should be the establishment of great manufacturing interests-and notably among these is cotton,

CAN one house nullify a law of the United States? For if the right is coextensive with the physical power, one house can prevent an appropriation of money as well as both houses; and if a law of the United States can be nullified by the refusal of an appropriation re-quired by that law for its enforcement, either house can nullify a law, though it requires the assent of both houses and the President, or of both houses by a two-thirds vote, to repeal that law .-

New York Tribune. If the Constitution is read aright it would seem that the appropriation bills must originate in the lower house-the direct representatives of the people. In England the rule is the same. No law or rule exists in either country that can be considered as coercive of making appropriations should they see fit not to. All appropriations are presumed to be made with a view to economy, otherwise the offering of a bill of supplies would be a mere formal matter. In order, also, that extravagant or unworthy appropriations may not be made the upper house and the President may interpose a check by voting down or vetoing. Consequently there is no nullification of a law, there is merely no provision made for wasting the people's money on a lot of "dead-beat" political adventurers. If it is essentially necessary for partisan purposes that these political worthies should be fed and elothed for purely political work let the money for their payment come out of the respective political campaign funds. The people do not care about being taxed for their support.

THE Stanley-Hazen court-martial has at last ended, the proceedings and findings sent to General Sherman for reviewal and by him indorsed and forwarded to the Secretary of War for approval by the President. Colonel Stanley, being found guilty of "conduct to "the prejudice of good order and mili-"tary discipline" in calling Colonel Hazen a coward and a liar, was sen- with revolutionary partisanship.

THE difference between a lawyer like Carpenter and a petty, quibbling demagogue like Blaine and Conkling is illustrated in the short speech Carpenter made in the Senate Monday on the Judicial appropriation bill, printed elsewhere in the Newsthis morning.

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT. The Infamous System of Packing Juries.

[Extract from Matt Carpenter's Speech on the Judicial Bill, June 16th.] Mr. Carpenter: I would be delighted to join with the lawyers of this body at any proper time in constructing a jury system for the Federal courts. It is a want that has existed for a long time. There is no such thing as a jury trial in any Federal court that I know of. In our country it is a trial by the marshal and the clerk, who can convict any in: n they please or acquit any man please by packing a jury. Our whole system of criminal jurisprudence is a disgrace to this nation. I am speaking, of course, of the Federal courts. The theory adopted now for compensating district attorneys is simply a scandal; it is offering a bribe to the produce convictions. We pay district attorneys I believe about $250 a year salary, and then we pay them so much for every fellow they can convict and a smaller sum for an acquittal. In other words, they are bribed to convict a man if they possibly can. A district attorney who prosecutes for the Govern-ment, who stands between the law and the alleged criminal, ought to be as impartial as the judge on the bench. He should have no more inducement to convict a man than to acquit him; and we ought to fix a salary for these officers graded or scaled according to the amount of business and the importance of the station in different districts of the country, and let the officer have no more in case of conviction than he has in case of acquittal. We ought to have some provision that would give defendwho are convicted in crimina cases a chance to be heard on writ of

In the celebrated case of the Commonwealth es. Porter, decided by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, where Judge Shaw delivered the opinion of the court, I recall his language; I quote it only from memory, not having read it for two or three years. He said in every well-constructed system for ad ministering criminal justice there will be after the trial at nisi prius an oppor tunity for the defendant to be heard on exceptions before the court in banc No doubt he said truly, and no doubt we have no perfect system for adminis-tering criminal justice. A man may be sentenced to be hanged for murder by a district judge in Oregon by a judgment notoriously erroneous; and yet strange to say, there is no way in our country, no way whatever, to reverse that judgment. A man may come to the Supreme Court of the United States to try the title to his farm if it be of the value of $5,000; but if it be nothing but his life that is at stake, no writ of error shall be allowed, no appellate court shall hear an exception, no writ of error shall be issued under any circumstance.

All that is simply disgraceful. During the six years that I was in the Senate I tried constantly to procure some bill that would establish a uniform system for drawing juries; but the Judiciary Committee as it was con-structed at that time took this view of the subject, that the only office of Congress was to keep the law just as it always has been, and nothing whatever could be accomplished. It is impossible here this evening, it is impossible here in the heat of this special session, to do anything decent, compared with the importance of this subject; and the reason why I regret the passage of this bill (as I suppose of course it is to pass) is that it is thought to be a partial remedy; and if it shall prove so it will a complete remedy to be accomplished

The bridal menus now becoming fashionable in Southern Germany, contain, when the facts will permit, almost an entire pictorial history of the lives of bride and groom. They are on cards of pretentious size, nearly eleven inches square, which are profusely il lustrated. The bridgegroom is depicted engaged in his usual occupation; at the bottom is the church wherein the ceremony was performed; at the top, mingled with hymeneal emblems, are photos of the most interested parties, and in the center stands the native home of the bride, around which is grouped the menu and the programme of music performed by the military band on the occasion. This would save the newspapers considerable trouble if adopted here.

Not Exactly the Chandler Organ.

Evening Telegram, Rep. We can conceive of only one thing that would make the candidature of General Grant possible in 1880, and that is he alternative of the success of Zack Chandler, for it is generally recognized that for very much of what was objectionable in President Grant's administration his Secretary of the Interior, Zach Chandler, must be held responsible. His bad influence was particularly felt during the later years of Grant's term, and to it may be attributed many or all of those arbitrary acts and decisions which made the administration unpopular.

October 7th, 1878, Western Union Tel-egraph stock sold at the New York Stock Exchange for 96.1-8 per October 14th, 1878, it sold at 86,3-4, a fluctuation of 9.3-8 per cent, in seven days, 12,500 shares sold on a margin of one per cent, required an actual capital of $12,500. The same stock delivered at 83.3-4 gave a profit of 9.3-8 per cent, on the stock or $337.50 per 100 shares. On the whole 12,500 the actual profit was 8117,187.50 or 93-8 times the capital Pork used, in one week. This is a single case taken from the official record of the Stock Exchange, and shows how money is made so rapidly in stocks. Few peo ple, however, have the necessary cash to put up in order to realize such immense profits as these, but capital in any amount from $10 to $50,000 can be used with equal success by the new combination system of operating the stocks which Messrs. Lawrence & Co., Bankers, New York, have established. By this method of pooling thousands of orders in various sums and operating them as one immense capital, share-holders realize large profits which are divided pro rata monthly. That the "St. Nicholas" hotel has reduced its rates to anti-hellum prices is another example of the enterprise and understanding of public wants which have made this house so distinguished among the New York houses of public entertainment. The table offers every luxury and delicacy, served in the most perfect style of cuisiniere, and all the ants of the guests are attended to the utmost care. This great hotel more than sustains the rank won by a quarter of a century of judicious and able catering for the tastes of the public. To come once is to be a permanent pat-
